Guidelines

Completing the notice

For the purpose of verifying the conditions for marriage, please answer all questions on pages 1, 2 and 3 of the notice of marriage and hand in the documents listed on page 4. Incomplete or wrong information may prevent verification from being completed.

If, prior to the marriage ceremony, there are changes to the information you have given the municipal authority, you must contact the authority immediately.

Submission

The notice of marriage must be completed and submitted to the municipal authority where either of the parties lives, together with the necessary attachments, enclosures and certificates (see page 4 of the notice).

If neither of the parties is resident in Denmark, the notice of marriage must be submitted to the municipal authority where one of the parties resides. At the same time, a fee of DKK 500 will be payable for verifying the conditions for marriage.

Foreigners

If a foreigner does not have a Danish personal identity (CPR) number, the date of birth must be stated.

Certificate of verification

If the marriage is to be performed by an authority other than the one that has undertaken the verification, the verifying authority (the municipal authority) must supply a certificate to the effect that the conditions for marriage have been met.

The parties must submit the certificate of verification to the marrying authority. The certificate of verification must have been issued at most four months before the wedding.

Name after marriage

Following the marriage, both parties retain their own surname, cf. Section 4, subs. 1 of Danish Act No. 193 of 29.4.1981 on Personal Names. However, either party can give notice that after the marriage they wish to assume the other party's surname as their married name. The other party must consent to this. However, it is not possible to assume a surname which the other party has acquired by virtue of a previous marriage or registered partnership.

Information about the place of marriage

Name • Church/town hall	Date of marriage

If a spouse has assumed the surname of the other spouse as married name, that person may use his or her own surname as a middle name preceding the married name. The marrying authority must be notified of this.

Own surname is the surname conferred upon the person at the time of birth or subsequently acquired on some basis other than marriage/registered partnership.

Undivided possession of estate

When a former spouse/registered partner has died

If you retain undivided possession of an estate, inheritance tax will be payable on remarrying, even if the other heirs agree that you still retain undivided possession. You are duty bound to report the taxable amount to the probate court. The rules concerning this are contained in Section 8, subs. 3, and Section 10, subs. 6, of the Danish Act on Duty on Estates and Gifts. Prior to the marriage, you should contact the probate court and obtain guidance about this tax.

Additional guidance

You can obtain additional guidance about marriage and verification of the conditions for marriage from the municipal authority.

The municipal authority can also provide you with the forms mentioned in this notice of marriage.

The rules concerning marriage and the conditions governing it are contained in the Danish Formation and Dissolution of Marriage Act and in a ministerial order and circular on contracting marriage.

Danish Personal Data Act

The municipal authority is entitled to obtain information from other sources with a view to checking the information received, cf. Section 12 of the Danish Marriage Act.

The municipal authority records the information received and passes the information on to other public authorities in accordance with the provisions set out in the legislation.

If you so wish, the municipal authority must tell you what information about you is being processed. You can demand to have any wrong information corrected.

Enclosures that must be submitted together with the notice

Documentary evidence of name and date of birth

The names of the parties must be documented by means of a birth, baptism (christening) or name certificate as well as a certificate proving any change of name.

For persons born in the region of Denmark known as Sønderjylland (North Schleswig), a birth certificate issued by the officer in charge of the civil register in the municipality where the birth was registered must be presented.

Any name(s) differing from or not shown by the birth, baptism or name certificate must be documented in some other way (e.g. marriage or partnership certificate).

A foreigner must document his/her date of birth or the correct spelling of his/her name by presenting e.g. a passport.

Legal residence in Denmark

Foreigners who are not nationals of one of the Nordic countries must prove that they are staying in Denmark legally. Guidance on this subject is obtainable on application to the municipal authority.

Persons whose marriage has ended in divorce in Denmark

The divorce must be documented by means of a divorce decree or a transcript of the judgement. The transcript must be endorsed by the city court that pronounced the judgement to the effect that the judgement has not been appealed ("appeal endorsement"). In the case of judgements delivered prior to 1 January 1983, it is the superior court that must furnish the transcript with an appeal endorsement.

Instead of an appeal endorsement, proof may be presented that the former spouse has relinquished any appeal or that such an appeal will be confined solely to the terms. This is not necessary, however, if the judgement shows that the former spouse has declared that he or she is in agreement with the statement concerning dissolution of the marriage by divorce, even if the spouse has not agreed to the terms of the divorce.

It must also be substantiated that there was either no community of property in the former marriage or that community of property poses no obstacle to remarriage. This can be done by having exemption from the division of property granted by the verifying authority. If no such exemption is granted, proof must be given by submitting one of the following documents:

1. Judgement or decree for separation or divorce, showing that the community property has been divided.
2. Property division agreement or other settlement showing that the community property has been divided.
3. Certificate from the probate court to the effect that the community property is or has been under administration by the court.
4. Declaration from the former spouse to the effect that the person in question has no claim to the division of property, or that out-of-court administration of the community property has been concluded. You can obtain a form from the verifying authority.
5. Proof that the former spouse has entered into a new marriage/registered partnership in Denmark.
6. Registered marriage contract, according to which all possessions in the previous marriage were fully covered by complete separate property or separation of property. Instead of a marriage contract, a judgement or decree for separation or divorce with the same tenor can be used.
7. Consent from the former spouse to enter into marriage, even though the community property has not been divided. You can obtain a form from the verifying authority.

The above applies also in the event of a registered partnership ending in divorce in Denmark.

Persons whose marriage has been brought to an end by death in Denmark

A spouse intending to remarry must document either that there was no community of property in the former marriage or that any community of property that did exist poses no obstacle to entering into a new marriage. This can be done by submitting one or more of the following documents:

1. Certificate from the probate court to the effect that the community property is or has been under public administration or handed over to an administrator.

2. Certificate from the probate court to the effect that the community property has been surrendered for out-of-court settlement and declarations from all heirs to the effect that such administration has been concluded.
3. Certificate from the probate court to the effect that the deceased left nothing.
4. Certificate from the probate court to the effect that the estate has been designated for distraint upon the estate to cover funeral expenses or in accordance with Section 10, subs. 2, of the Danish Administration of Estates Act of 1874 with subsequent amendments.
5. Certificate from the probate court to the effect that the community property has been passed to the surviving spouse or in accordance with Section 22 of the Danish Act on the Administration of Deceased Persons' Estates, cf. Danish Inheritance Act, Section 7 b, subs. 2, or in accordance with Section 62 b, subs. 2, of the Administration of Estates Act of 1874 with subsequent amendments.
6. Declaration from all heirs to the deceased to the effect that they forfeit any administration. This applies only if the surviving spouse retains undivided possession of the estate. Proof of who is heir to the deceased must be furnished in the form of a probate court certificate. You can obtain a form from the verifying authority.
7. Certificate from the probate court or registered marriage contract, according to which all possessions in the previous marriage were fully covered by complete separate property.
8. Documentation of separation, including division of property, separate estate or lapse of any claim to a division of property if the spouses were separated at the time prior to death and the surviving spouse declares that matrimonial cohabitation has not been resumed.
9. Consent from all heirs to enter into marriage although the estate has not yet been administered. It must be proved by means of a certificate from the probate court who is heir to the deceased. You can obtain a form from the verifying authority.

You can also apply to the verifying authority for exemption from division of property.

The above also applies in the event of termination of a registered partnership by death in Denmark.

Foreign divorces and death certificates

Documentation of divorces from countries other than those in the Nordic region must be approved by the local government office (in Copenhagen: the Prefect) at the place where one of the parties lives. If neither of the parties is living in Denmark, the case will be dealt with by the local government office in the place where the municipality that will verify the conditions for marriage is located. In addition, an application for exemption from division of property must be lodged with the verifying authority.

You can obtain guidance about the conditions for acknowledging:

foreign divorces, from the local government office

foreign death certificates, from the verifying authority.

Leave yourself plenty of time to seek guidance about the conditions for acknowledging foreign divorces and death certificates.

Persons under the age of 18

Anyone under the age of 18 may not enter into marriage without the following:

Permission from the local government office (in Copenhagen: the Prefect). Forms for this purpose are available from the municipal authority or local government office.

Written consent of the parents, unless the young person has previously contracted a marriage/registered partnership or the local government office has issued a dispensation.
